ImagineIF Adds More Online Resources to their Virtual Branch

This month ImagineIF added two more options to their extensive list of online resources. In addition to Hoopla, a streaming media platform launched in late April, ImagineIF brought on Lynda.com and Pressreader to their online arsenal.

Lynda.com from LinkedIn offers professional skills-building courses, which is especially helpful for those wishing to enhance their resume from home. Lynda's video library includes more than 16,000 classes lead by industry experts in programs including Excel, Photoshop, and Zoom as well as skills like leadership and time management. Library cardholders will be able to pursue personal and professional goals at their own pace from the comfort of their home. To get started, follow the Lynda.com link found at <https://imagineiflibraries.org/> and log in with your ImagineIF library card number.

Pressreader offers unlimited digital access to more than 7,000 newspapers and magazines from around the world, including top titles like Rolling Stone, the Chicago Tribune, and Vogue. Subject offerings span the gamut from news, health, business, and sports to art, automotive, cooking, and entertainment. Titles may be read online or downloaded to a device such as a mobile phone or tablet. Pressreader also offers increased accessibility with options to adjust text size or listen to audio recordings of articles. To get started, ImagineIF cardholders should log in to their account at <https://imagineiflibraries.org/> and then follow the Pressreader link found on the ImagineIF online catalog.

To access these and other online resources, or to sign-up for a library card, go to ImagineIF's new "At Home With ImagineIF" webpage at: <https://imagineiflibraries.org/>
